SPRINGVALE NOTES

The Young Folks' Fireside Club will hold their next meeting on Friday evening, the 16th inst., at the Spring-school.

The meeting will be of a social and recreational nature. There will be games and music, but the feature of the evening will be an address by Mr. J. Gaetz, of Red Deer.

We feel that in announcing Mr. Gaetz to address us, we do ourselves

KEEPING FASHIONABLE

Eliza Correll believed in clothes. "Clothes make the man—and they also make the girl," she told her sister repeatedly. "Some day you'll learn that you ought to dress up more and keep fashionable."

Certainly Eliza kept fashionable. Eight dollars constituted her weekly stipend, earned by mixing tempting potions at Silverworth's drug store. Eliza was one of a half dozen girls who presided within the circular formation of marble at which alpine sandal, submarine splitts and tank sodas were served, and the high cost of living, the fate of the League of Nations, the future of Jug-Slavia and the salaries of the film stars discussed.

But the eight dollars—to return to the subject—Of the eight dollars, two went for board and room and the remaining six were expended to adorn Eliza with fashion's latest creations. Board and room for two dollars a week? Yes, you see Eliza lived at home, as did her sister, Isabel.

Isabel clerked in Piemmel's dry goods store, and her share of the world's goods every week was seven dollars. Of this seven two went for board and room, fifteen cents purchased cinema thrills at the Palace Theatre, an average of 68 cents was used for wearing apparel and $3.14 was deposited in the bank.

Contrasted with Eliza's extensive and expensive wardrobe, Isabel's adornment was like a minnow unto a goldfish; yet the latter seemed satisfied with her lot in life and never complained about her rather drab nevertheless neat attire.

Nor was there reason to complain; for Isabel could have afforded more attractive garb as well as her younger sister—could better afford it, in fact, because she had several hundred dollars in safe keeping.

With the situation as it was regarding clothes, the two girls should have changed positions. Silk at a soda fountain was out of place as cotton behind the silk counters, where Isabel presided. Yet each of the girls was an expert in her particular line of endeavor.

Eliza had a secret. She was in love. Every afternoon there came into Silverworth's drug store a fascinating young man who had the ginger-ale habit. The sun might forget to shine, the clock might stop, the river might run dry, but always at 2 p.m. John Hendricks settled himself at his favorite spot at the marble counter (unless someone else got there first) and ordered ginger-ale.

Then he would plunge into the depths of a newspaper and remain absorbed in it until his beverage arrived, when he would fold the paper, thrust it into a pocket and sip of the cooling concoction, while his eyes roved abstractedly and looked at nothing in particular, although seeming to take in everybody and everything in his range of vision.

Yes, Eliza Correll loved John Hendricks. She did not know his name, she had never spoken a word to him or been addressed by him except on a matter of business. She waited on his order; but John Hendricks noticed her not at all.

Being in love with some one she did not know, Eliza felt that he behooved her to interest him in it by in her power; so she paid even more attention to her clothes, and deprived herself of all forms of amusement so that she might make herself what she styled "presentable" before the "ginger-ale fiend." Be it said to her credit that she did not purchase her raincoat on credit.

"There's one hopeful thing about it," she told herself. "He's a brute, and I'm a blond; and they say that's the way it ought to be."

It seemed fine to be in love, even if it was unrequited. Eliza thought, and then she got to wondering if her sister ever had experienced the exhilaration attendant on being get attention by the little winged god with bows and arrows. One day Eliza observed:

"Isabel, it's about time you got married. But there's no chance in the world for you, with those plain clothes you wear."

To which Isabel replied merely with a smile and went her way. "She's a deep one," Eliza mused. "That's the way with brunets. The ginger-ale fiend must be a deep one, too."

But in spite of her natural charms—for Eliza was a good-looking girl—assisted by her modish attire, John Hendricks continued to order his ginger ale, read his paper, sip his drink and hurry out of the store.

One morning as she lay in bed watching a few stray minutes of semi-slumber, a startling fact crept into Eliza's brain. She had no clean clothes. She had been working hard, and then usual of late, and had allowed her soiled garments to accumulate. She had intended to wash up a waist, and skirt the night before, but had forgotten to do it.

She leaped from bed, on the verge of a panic. Horrors! Go behind the soda fountain with soiled clothes? Impossible! What was to be done? There was nothing that could be done unless—oh, she couldn't do that, and yet—well, it was the only course.

She shook her sister, who was not due at the clothing store until Eliza had been mixing drinks for an hour. "Isabel!" cried Eliza. "Wake up! Can you let me wear a waist and skirt of yours today? I hate to ask you, but mine aren't fit."

Isabel sat up and rubbed her eyes, and yawned, then glared at Eliza as though debating whether to send her limb from limb.

"You want—to—borrow—a—waist—and—skirt?" she said, as though she could not believe her ears. "You—youngest of fashion—you want to wear my plain clothes?"

Eliza felt somewhat abashed. "Well, no, I don't really want to," she replied, "but there's nothing else to do."

So it was that Eliza Correll, fashion plate of Silverworth's soda emporium, appeared that morning in plain attire—startlingly plain—so plain that her fellow-workers were awe-stricken and talked in undertones.

While she worked Eliza became filled with apprehension. "What will the ginger-ale fiend think?" she wondered, and resolved to keep out of sight at 2 o'clock. But this proved impossible, for at 1:45 a rush began and every available hand was needed.

"Maybe he won't come today," Eliza thought, but she realized she might as well try to halt time itself in its flight. Sure enough, at 2 o'clock, in walked John Hendricks. He seated himself and waited for his customary course of procedure. Eliza tried to Listen!

Have you heard about Peps? Peps is a scientific preparation put up in a pill form, which provides an entirely new and effective treatment for coughs, colds, chest and throat troubles.

Peps contains certain medicinal ingredients which when placed upon the tongue, immediately turn into vapor, and are breathed down the air passages to the lungs. On their journey, they soothe the inflamed and irritated membranes of the bronchial tubes, the delicate walls of the air passages, and finally enter and carry relief and healing to the lungs.

In a word, while no liquid or solid can get to the lungs and air passages, Peps furnishes direct relief, and at once commences healing.

keep in the background, but all the girls were busy and "service" was a synonym at Silverworth's.

"Well, here you are. All is lost," she murmured and approached John Hendricks. "For the first time in history he smiled at her."

"Hello," he said pleasantly. "I'd like a ginger ale. You're new at this job, aren't you?"

Eliza's power of speech was paralyzed momentarily, but she managed to get it in working order long enough to stammer:

"No—oh no; that is, not especially now. I've been here off and on."

"Never noticed you before," said the ginger ale fiend. "Must be you had different hours."

Eliza designed no reply. She busied herself with the ginger ale, while John plunged into his newspaper, laying it down to smile at her again as she returned with his favorite drink and it was a friendly smile, a sincere smile; and "nothing fresh about it," as Eliza remarked afterward.

When she gave him a check, instead of leaving, he said:

"I've asked Miss Joyce to introduce me. I need some one to help me use a couple of tickets at the Temple to-night."

Miss Joyce, another soda fountain worker, thereupon formally made them acquainted, and arrangements were made for the theatre party.

When Isabel went home that afternoon she found Eliza enthusiastically busy at the washbasin. The news was too good to keep and Isabel was informed of the big event of the day at the soda fountain, where hearing her sister's story, she said:

"Eliza, you made a hit with that young man because you wore plain clothes—my clothes. Take my advice and leave off the gaudy stuff tonight. You can win my dear sister's party."

Eliza completed the work at the tub, but when John Hendricks called for her she did not attend in her sister's Sunday garments.

One week later Eliza announced to her sister that she was going to marry John Hendricks, the real estate man.

"Congratulations," said Isabel. "As you've confided in me I might as well tell you that I'm to become Mrs. Hendricks, the wife of the assistant manager of our store."

"Congratulations yourself," returned Eliza. "You certainly did have the right idea about bettering Isabel. John told me last night, when he proposed, that he had been looking for a girl who didn't overdress. After all, the clothes don't make the girl. They help a lot, but they must not be overdone."

"Do you know anybody who wants to buy a secondhand wardrobe—one that's guaranteed against Cupid's arrows?"

BANK CLEARINGS SHOW INCREASE

The first financial week of the new year has mounted upward by leaps and bounds in volume of business done over the same period in 1919, according to the clearing house figures announced for Edmonton Thursday morning.

These bank clearings for the week are $3,088,977, as compared with $4,507,182 for the corresponding initial week of 1919, a clear gain of $3,541,815.

The figures for the last quarter of the old year showed a rapidly growing increase each week over the totals of 1918, but last week's gain was in excess of anything recorded during 1919, and indicates that general business in the city and district is expanding to a remarkable extent in spite of the fact that the great bulk of the grain north of Alberta's crop region is still to be sold, owing to the congestion of transportation on the railways.

Sir John Craig Eaton

New Director

C.P.R.

Honorary Colonel Sir John Craig Eaton, K.B., whose appointment to the Canadian Pacific Railway Company's directorate has been just announced, is best known to the mass of the American public as president and dominant personality of the T. Eaton Co. Ltd. of Toronto and Winnipeg, the largest departmental institution of the Dominion, for which his father, the late Timothy Eaton, fifty years ago laid the foundation. In official circles Sir John is even better known as probably the foremost Canadian in civilian co-operation with the forces of government during the war period. And in the realm of trade he leads as an exponent of scientific organization, while at the same time recognizing the human equation in the labor factor.

Sir John was born in Toronto April 28, 1876, receiving his education in the public schools of his native city and Upper Canada College. He began his commercial career with his father's growing establishment, the business of which has more than doubled in volume under his administration, his individual foresight leading to the opening of the Western house at Winnipeg in 1905, and the Montreal, N.B. outpost this past season. In addition to being president of the T. Eaton Co., he is director of the Dominion Bank, the Canadian National Exhibition Association, and Wellstar Hospital; a member of the Senate of Victoria College, Toronto; an honorary governor, trustee and member of the Finance Committee of the Toronto General Hospital; a member of the Toronto Board of Trade and of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association; also one of Canada's best known clubmen and sportsmen, with yachting, fishing and motoring as his favorite forms of recreation. Political honors, though proffered like Caesar's crown, he has time again refused.

Knighted June 3, 1916, he was incidentally the recipient on Sept. 1919, of the special decoration of the Navy League, this being an exceptional honor conferred on but twenty-eight persons in all the Empire within the past twenty years. In partial explanation it will be remembered that early in the war Sir John turned over to the Admiralty his five private yachts, the Florence, which served on the Atlantic Coast patrol under the ensign until no longer required. In the late autumn of 1916, during the war period, he also organized, equipped and sent overseas the Eaton Machine gun batteries; while over $1,000,000 of his private fortune was expended in the maintenance of dependents of Eatonians at the front, the weekly payroll exceeding $10,000. Two thousand six hundred and eighty-two voluntary recruits went from the T. Eaton Co.'s establishments to the body representing 33.26 per cent of the company's male employees. And while the men were fighting for flag and freedom, Sir John provided liberally for their families at home. His wage roll of patriotism exceeding $2,000,000 in the ultimate total.

The inclusion of Sir John Eaton on the Canadian Pacific directorate gives that pioneer national transcontinental road not only another experienced business general capable of and accustomed to thinking and acting in large proportions. It has also given it a man who perhaps more than any other in the Dominion believes in the application of the Golden Rule to everyday affairs and has proven recognition of the human equation to be successful policy, in the operation of his own large concerns.
